

FEMA Evacuation

A woman named Meg Kitchen shared with a large group of people how she went through a FEMA evacuation for a chemical spill in her area. FEMA pounded on their door at 2:30 in the morning giving them 3 minutes to grab what they could and get in their bus to be evacuated. They were only allowed to bring what they could hold on their lap. Any “hazardous” materials they confiscated which included knives, guns and lighters. So if these items were in your emergency kits, they were taken from you.

People were forced to get on the bus to evacuate and if they refused, they were tazered. If a bus got full before all your family members were on, they would be escorted to go on a different bus which may go to a different location.

They were driven 20 miles away from the area to a school gymnasium set up as their emergency shelter. Each person was given about a 4 by 8 foot of space. They had guards at the door for safety, but also to keep other people who were not part of the evacuation from entering and taking supplies, like homeless people. She said the toilet facilities in the school broke within 24 hours due to the overload and would not flush. The lights were on the whole time with constant noise 24/7.

She advised every person listening to not get on a FEMA bus for evacuation unless you've counted the seats first and know there are enough for all of your family. Let your pets outside to fend for themselves as sadly, most pets left inside were found dead upon return. She said people who were PROVEN VOTERS got moved to the front of the line for food and supplies.

The items she mentioned that were super helpful in this situation were:

1. Earplugs. To be able to sleep with all the noise.
2. Bandana. To cover your eyes from the light and as a face covering.
3. USB flash drive. With digital files showing your social security card, birth certificate, pictures of you and your family, and other forms of ID. A birth certificate alone wasn't enough.
4. Whistle
5. Chapstick. Keep lips from drying and cracking.
6. Water Purification
7. Compass
8. LED Light